LA CASA FITZCARRALDO

CASA FITZCARRALDO is the birthplace of the legendary Werner Herzog film with Klaus Kinski, Claudia Cardinale and Huerequeque, the drunken cook played by the local celebrity Enrique Bohorquez Liguori. It is only 15 minutes away from the center of Iquitos. Here you can get some sun (or shade), swing in a hammock, take a stroll out back by the lake or absorb a bird's-eye view from our tri-level treehouse overlooking a pool of crystal clear water that is cooled down to a perfect 25 degrees Celsius. Here the eco system has been respected and reforestation is not just a word. We probably have the biggest cedar tree in Iquitos and have planted some 40 more on the property along with palms and fruit trees as well as decorative jungle flowers, orchids and medicinal plants.

It has shady huts around the pool where we offer a variety drinks and local food specialties like ceviche, cecina, Dorado, barbeque chicken, patarashca de corvina or tucunare, as well as Italian dishes on request.

It has beautiful blue and green rooms upstairs with mahogany parquet floors and private bathrooms. They have queen-sized beds, minibar, ceiling fan, telephone, & satellite TV. Wireless Wi-Fi internet access is available not only in the rooms but also around the pool and malocas and even up to the top level of our treehouse. We also offer a small room on the lower level plus a bungalow
